2024 Command Safety Goal: Increase Medical Surveillance Compliance (90% or Greater)

Occupational Medical Surveillance refers to a systematic and ongoing process of monitoring the health of individuals exposed to specific occupational hazards or conditions in the workplace. The goal is to identify and prevent work-related illnesses or injuries by regularly assessing the health status of Marines and Civilian Marines who may be exposed to hazardous substances, physical agents, or other workplace conditions. The surveillance involves regular health examinations, screenings, and monitoring of various health parameters. This process helps in early detection of potential health issues related to occupational exposures, allowing for timely intervention and preventive measures.

The 2024 Command Safety Goal for Marine Corps Logistics Base Command is to achieve a Medical Surveillance compliance rate of 90% or higher. This objective aims to safeguard the health and well-being of both Marines and Civilian Marines by systematically monitoring and managing occupational exposures, minimizing potential health risks associated with workplace conditions.
